It's not too late and your not too old! to change your quality of life

By Mark Flint (3rd year apprentice CBC Belfast)

Soon after coming to know the Lord, age 19, I got a great desire to go to Bible College. But I thought you had to overcome addictions in your own strength and because I kept failing I got stuck in a cycle of guilt and condemnation. I had an awful self-image and couldn't find the courage to go to Bible College. Over the years the desire to go to Bible College kept returning and I found out that Andrew Wommack ran one in the U.K. There were practical issues to overcome - I left my job, sold our house and moved with my wife and kids to rented accommodation and different schools 100 miles away. the biggest challenge that I faced was to deal with my sense of failure. At age 36, after several aborted attempts, I finally started at CBC in September 2002. Going through the two-year course at CBC was not the easiest ride, and there were opportunities to quit.

But I want to tell you that finishing the course was the single most beneficial thing I've done to get to know the Lord. The cost of going to college does not even compare to the quality of life I now have through receiving this word. I am so grateful to CBC, the message of grace and love that Andrew Wommack and the CBC instructors share.
